Mining, Injustice, and Women: Issues for Canadians

Almost half of the head offices of publicly listed mining operations worldwide are registered in Canada.

Widespread, well-documented abuse and injustice associated with mining have a disproportionately negative impact on the lives of women – particularly in mining communities in sub-Saharan Africa.

"I want a world where… women and communities are empowered…. We must build that empowerment together so that every woman can stand up for herself and others.” Gladys Mauhusa of WOMIN (African Women United Against Destructive Resource Extraction)

WHEN: Monday, November 18, 2019  1 - 3 pm

WHERE: Bloor Street United Church, 300 Bloor Street West

OUR PANELISTS:

Rachel Small, Community Organizer with the Mining Injustice Solidarity Network.

Jim Davis, Africa Partnerships Coordinator at KAIROS: Canadian Ecumenical Justice Initiatives

Erin Simpson, past Legal Counsel to the Canadian Network for Corporate Accountability (CNCA)

Rachel, Jim and Erin will share their perspectives on Canadian global mining practices, impacts on women and families, and avenues and actions to limit harm and increase corporate accountability.

Everyone is welcome at no charge, but donations are appreciated. Please reserve a space by registering at eventbrite.ca

This event is sponsored by the GTA branch of the Grandmothers Advocacy Network (GRAN) in support of the UN Women’s UNiTE to End Violence Against Women Campaign.
